Is Murder a Crime?

In all well-regulated communities the unanimous reply to this question would be yes; that the shedding of human blood, or the sacrifice of human life, is the highest degree of crime of which a man can be guilty, and can only be justified on the grounds of self-preservation or cases of urgent and imperative necessity.

In the colony of Vancouver Island, however, the wanton sacrifice of human life is not, we deeply regret to say, viewed in the light of so grievous an offence as it ought to be; but on the contrary, he who imbrues his hands in the blood of his fellow man; who, with the deadly knife or the unerring revolver, ushers the victim of his hellish malice or ungovernable passion unprepared into the presence of his Maker, is, by a verdict of twelve of his peers, under the solemn bann of an oath, deliberately pronounced "not guilty" of any offence against the law, or even the peace and safety of the community.

The result of the trial of Millington for the killing of Coombs, must have struck every right-thinking man with profound amazement; and in view of such a verdict, in the face of the evidence adduced to prove the prisoner's guilt, well may people shudder with fear and apprehension when they contemplate the consequences of a verdict which virtually declares that murder is not a crime, even of minor magnitude; that human life may be sacrificed with impunity, and that the long-cherished boast that under the British banner every man's life and property are held sacred and secure is but a mockery and a delusion. After such verdicts as have been given in the cases of Snelling and Millington, the particulars of which are still fresh in the minds of every one, no person's life need be valued at a very high price. The would-be assassin, when he contemplates perpetrating a deed of bloody revenge, may well, and but too safely, calculate upon accomplishing his work with comparative or total impunity, in view of the precedents which have been established in the cases above alluded to. In neither case, to our mind, were there such mitigating circumstances as to justify the enormity of the offence with which the prisoners were charged; and yet both, we may say, have virtually, if not actually, been justified in what they did by juries of their country, solemnly sworn before God and their fellow men to do impartial justice according to the evidence, without fear, favor, or affection.

It is not our business to inquire into the motives which actuated those upon whom devolved the duty of pronouncing judgment in these two painful and solemn cases. We admit it to be a fearfully responsible position to be placed in; involving, as it does, the life or death of a fellow creature. But while we would carefully guard the interests of the accused, and freely accord him the benefit of any doubt that might possibly exist in his case; still, we should not forget that we owe an equally sacred duty to society, to see that crime shall not be allowed to pass unpunished, and that however strong our sympathies may be toward the accused, they must be laid aside in the discharge of a sacred and imperative duty. Without this high and holy regard for justice—stern though it be and momentous in its consequences—the sanctity of our Courts will become a bye-word and a reproach, and trial by jury a solemn farce.

It has been stated—with what degree of truth we cannot say—that, on the trial of Snelling, as well as that of Millington, there were those upon the jury conscientiously opposed to capital punishment under any circumstances; and that, consequently, those persons would not, no matter how strong the evidence against the accused, agree to a verdict imperilling the life of the prisoners. We always entertain the greatest respect for the conscientious convictions of others; but for that description of conscientiousness which will allow a man to perjure himself—to swear before God that he will a "true verdict give according to the evidence"—while at the same moment his mind is fully made up that he will not do anything of the kind—we confess we do not entertain a very high regard. On the contrary, we look upon such conscientiousness as a very dangerous principle, and those who are thus actuated as decidedly dangerous citizens. We trust, however, that such reports are without foundation; but if, unfortunately, such there are in our midst, let us hope that they never will allow themselves to assume so false and dangerous a position. The interests and safety of the whole community demand that they shall not sit on juries in such cases, and no false notions of philanthropy should induce them to assume a position, the duties of which they cannot discharge without violence to their own consciences, or the utter disregard of the sacred obligations of an oath. The case of Millington is, we trust, the last of the kind we shall have to chronicle for many a long day to come. He has been allowed to escape the consequences of the fearful crime with which he stood accused, and we hope he has thereby learned a lesson, which will be profitable to him for the remainder of his life. As regards the moral effect and consequences of his acquittal upon a community such as we have here, we must confess that we entertain very grave and serious doubts. Doubtless the jury who tried his case can reconcile their verdict to their own consciences; but we feel persuaded that few indeed who have read the report of the trial will admit the correctness of their decision.

Colonial Governors.

The London Daily News holds the following opinions about Colonial Governors:

"A colony is very apt to estimate the value in which it is held at home by the character of the man sent out by the Colonial office to preside over its affairs. By the appointment of a governor of acknowledged political ability and capacity, of cultivated manners, of moral standing, and of pure domestic life, the colony is not only, and very properly flattered, but receives a real benefit in being thus furnished with a high standard of political, moral, and social life. If, on the other hand a governor is sent out either deficient in these qualities, or a lifeless and perfunctory person, or of inferior political, intellectual, or moral reputation, a feeling is at once excited in the colony that in the selection other considerations than its welfare and happiness have prevailed, that its interests are little cared for or attended to in Downing street, and that the public at home cannot be roused to control or defeat the indifference or jobbery of the Colonial Minister.

There cannot be a greater mistake than to suppose that the importance of Colonial Governors has decreased under responsible government in the Australian, African and Northern American Colonies. True it is that there are ministers standing between them and the local legislatures, and that a Colonial Ministry can fall ignominiously without affecting the esteem in which the Colonial Governor is held. Nevertheless the experience, the tact, the temper, the independent judgment, and the better knowledge of human nature of a competent governor must always be of inestimable value to the political affairs of a colony, without involving him in its party conflicts. The political duties of a Colonial Governor are, however, in some sort, subordinate to his other duties. It is for him and his family to preside over the courtesies, amanities, charities, and society of the colony, to bring together and harmonize, so far as possible, its discordant elements, to diffuse a spirit of toleration and good feeling throughout its ecclesiastical and social disagreements, to diffuse the humanities, and unstintingly extend the elegancies and refinements of life, and to encourage activity, zeal, intelligence, in whatever shape they may be manifested—in short, if we may be allowed the illustration, to play that useful and valuable part on a small stage which the Sovereign plays on a large stage at home."

BADLY CUT.—From a private source, we learn that a man named Tucker was fearfully cut with an ax in the hands of another with whom he had a difficulty at Port Discovery Mills, on Monday last. The assailant escaped.

Two ELEGANT SETS OF PARLOR

To Be the Thing We Seem.

BY MRS. LOXON CONYNGHAM.

To be the thing we seem;
To do the thing we deem
Enjoined by duty.
To walk in faith, nor dream
Of questioning God's scheme
Of truth and beauty.

Casting self-love aside,
Discarding human pride,
Our hearts to measure;
In humble pride to bide,
Each change in fortune's tide,
A God's good pleasure.

To trust, although deceived,
Tell truth, though not believed;
Falschold disdaining:
Patient of ills received.
To ponder when aggrieved;
Passion restraining.

With love no wrongs can chill,
To save, unweary still,
The weak from falling;
This is to do God's will
On earth—and to fulfill
Our Heavenly calling.

INSANITY AND IMAGINATION.—It is a common error to suppose that insanity and imagination go oftenest together. I for one, have rarely seen them allied. The boiler seldom bursts that possesses a safety valve. The inmates of lunatic asylums are usually persons of finely strung nerves and limited ideality, the most unfortunate of all combinations. It is the effort of the dumb to speak that oversets the brain. When imagination is true it is very stable, as well as very demonstrative. Could anything have driven Voltaire crazy? Was not Byron the coolest of practical self-lovers? Who so rational as epicurean Tom Moore? Who so real as loyal Walter Scott? Who so self-poised as Woodsworth and Southey? Overwork did, indeed, soften the brain of some of these, but that might come from any continuous exertion—nursing the sick, setting up type, reading too continuously, digesting ill, being annoyed by debt, puzzling out problems.

Madness is a thing apart from this physical condition, as I consider it. The idea of Pope going crazy, or Shakespeare, or old Sam Johnson, queer as he was, seems so preposterous that it makes one smile to think of it. And as for Charles Lamb, the hero of the age, the hereditary taint took the form of genius with him, evidently, and found its safety-valve thus, or he might have been as wild as Bridget Elia. Cowper, too, was half saved from madness by his genius alone. There stands before me, as well as I can remember, but one exception to this ordinary rule in the history of the gifted, in the person of Dean Swift. He rises to my imagination like a gigantic blasted oak-tree, standing out alone and lightning-scathed in the midst of a bare and desolate heath, a mystery and a warning. Some cleaving curse was there.—Miss Warfield.

Mrs. PARTINGTON ON "ROSTRUMS."—Here is a new article for beautifying the complexion," said the pedler to Mrs. Partington.

"Is it, indeed?" said she; "well they may get up ever so many rostrums for beautifying the complexion, but, depend upon it, the less people have to do with bottles for it, the better. My neighbor, Mrs. Blotch, has been using a bottle a good many years for complexion, and her nose looks like a rupture of Mount Vesuvius, with the burning lather running all over the contagious territory."

HEALTH FOR A SHILLING! Holloway's Pills.

Headaches, Bile, Loss of Appetite, and Lowness of Spirits.

These Pills require no interruption of business or pleasure; they act mildly on the bowels, strengthen the stomach, and promote a healthy action of the liver, whereby they purify the blood, cleanse the skin, brace the nerves, and invigorate the whole system. They effect a truly wonderful change in debilitated constitutions, as they create a healthy appetite, correct indigestion, remove bile, giddiness, headaches, and palpitation of the heart.

Weakness and Debility.

In cases of debility, languor, and nervousness generated by excess of any kind, whether mental or physical, the effect of these Pills is in the highest degree bracing, renovating and restorative. They drive from the system the morbid cause of disease; re-establish the digestion, regulate all the secretions, brace the nervous system, raise the patient's spirits, and bring back the frame to its pristine health and vigor. They increase the appetite, while they secure perfect digestion to any ordinary food, and release the invalid from restraint in diet.

A WORD to Females.

There are two periods, especially in Woman's life, which require safe passage, judgment and attention. Irregularity is apt at those critical times to take place, and to lay the foundation of future disease. These Pills, safe in action, and effective in result, should be taken at certain periods, and the issue will be marvellous both to the young and the middle aged. They prevent nervousness, hysterics, dropsy, and a host of similar serious disorders, by expelling all impurities from the system, therefore none should ever be without them.

Coughs, Colds, and Asthma.

No medicine will cure colds so quickly as these Pills, when of long duration or settled on the chest, or even though it has assumed the first stage of asthma, they may be relied on as a certain and never failing cure, particularly if the Ointment be well rubbed into the chest and throat night and morning. If this catch the eye of any asthmatical person so bad as even not able to lie down in bed, let him well use these two preparations for only a week, and the result will be marvellous.

BLOOD to the HEAD—Diseases of the Heart.

More persons die suddenly from diseases of the heart than the unendured suppose; in such complaints, the bowels should always be kept well open, as also where there is a tendency of blood to the head. These celebrated Pills purify the blood in an extraordinary manner, and should be taken in copious doses when such symptoms occur, taking care not to overload the stomach; by this means all danger is quickly averted.

Children's Complaints.

It is not generally known, but such is the fact, that children require medicine oftener than their parents. Three-fourths of all children die before they attain the age of eight years. Let mothers, then, be wise, and give to their children small doses of these invigorating Pills once or twice every week, in such quantity as may not gently upon the system twice in the twenty-four hours. For infants, a Pill may be crushed and given as a powder in a little water. The gross humors that are constantly floating about in the blood of children, the forerunners of so many complaints, will thus be expelled, and the lives of thousands saved and preserved to their parents.
